Latin Oration.

IN the same Convocation the following Oration was delivered by the Public Orator:—

Oratio in Theatro Sheldoniano habita trecentesimum annum a Bibliotheca Bodleiana condita celebrantibus Academicis.

Scire vos velim, insignes Viri, nobis Oxoniensibus pergratum esse, hospitio vos hodie excipere, et studiorum communitate vobiscum gaudere. Ea autem occasio quæ tam præclaram contionem huc attraxit neque vulgaris est neque trita; immo vero ut Universitate nostra dignissimam esse censeo, ita vobis iucundam fore spero, qui operæ pretium esse putaveritis hanc Musarum sedem adire et commemorationi festæ interesse.

Hodie ferias triseculares celebrare in animo est, et Thomæ Bodleii memoriam repetere, quippe trecentesimus annus iam nunc agitur ex quo vir munificentissimus Bibliothecam suam auspiciis lætis inauguravit. Neque tamen adeo sumus insulsi ut hos CCC annos quidquam aliud esse æstimemus quam punctum temporis minimum; aut ut venerabilem Bibliothecæ Bodleianæ antiquitatem iactantius venditemus; quasi huiusce solum esset ætatis libros vel tabularia condere et seculi futuri utilitatibus hoc modo inservire. Itaque ne nimis gloriemur, præstat non utique CCC annorum seriem numerare, sed potius ad illam vetustatem ascendere quæ ab ætate nostra pæne sex mille annorum spatio est divisa. Stupore quodam obruimur dum animo repræsentare conamur publicas illas bibliothecas quas reges antiqui vel in regione Accadica vel apud Nineven urbem fundaverint, ubi condita sint tot tantaque historiæ scientiæ religionis monimenta, nunc lateribus coctis nunc coriis incisa. Quid, quod inter sescenta illa miracula quæ apud Cretam insulam sunt detecta, effossis nuperrime veteris palatii ruinis, credibile est patefactas esse bibliothecæ reliquias; ubi rudes notæ tabulis fictilibus inscriptæ ignoti sermonis ambages ostendunt? Quæ quidem ut a Musei Ashmoleani custode nostro sunt apertæ, ita ab eodem spero fore ut mox explicentur. Quodsi Ægypti annales scrutamur, hinc habetis principis Osymandiæ thesaurum, quem ψυχῆς ἰατρεῖον merito nominavit, hinc Ptolemæorum studium qui in hoc negotio cum regibus Pergamenis ultro decertaverint. Neque librorum incuriosus erat Augustus Imperator, cuius rei testis est Apollo Palatinus; neque Traianus Romæ, neque Byzantii Constantinus in hac humanitatis parte deficiebat.

Incredibile vero damnum quis æstimabit, cum propter barbarorum incursiones et atrocem bellorum seriem cuncta fere monimenta aut diruta essent aut ignibus absumpta, ita ut doctrinæ quidquid superesset in monachorum secessus ablatum umbratilem quasi vitam suscipere cogeretur, ne omnino perirent reliquiæ? Quam quidem salutis viam constat nostrates tunc temporis præsertim muniisse. Renascente autem doctrinæ cultu optime de posteris meriti sunt Italici nobiles gratia et divitiis admodum pollentes: inter quos Laurentius ille Mediceus primas partes sustinet. Est autem confitendum illo tempore patriam nostram adeo non ad humanitatem aut ad litterarum studium quidquam contulisse, ut neque principibus neque privatis cura esset aut conquirendi libros aut conservandi.

Ad Bodleii laudes libentius accedo, Bibliothecæ nostræ fundatoris: quanquam, si paullo accuratius dixerim, restituendi potius quam fundandi gloriam sibi vindicat; quippe nullo modo est obliviscendum quantum debeat hæc Academia (ut ceteros sileam) Humfredo Glocestriæ bono Duci, inter amplissimos Universitatis benefactores in perpetuum commemorato; ita ut ipsius Bibliothecæ pars media (etiamsi patroni dona diu deperierint) Humfredi nomen etiamnunc conservet. Pudet enim recordari "irreparabile illud rei litterariæ dispendium," et hominum ignarorum vel vecordiam vel malevolentiam, quæ eo inhumanitatis est progressa ut neque libris tanto labore collectis neque ipsius Bibliothecæ vel forulis vel etiam subselliis parceret. Sed quattuor fere annis post hanc infamiam Universitati inustam, Collegii Sanctæ Mariæ Magdalenæ ordinibus adscriptus est Thomas Bodleius, iuvenis haud singulari, ut videbatur, ingenio præditus, neque æqualibus suis admodum præcellens. Mox autem, in Societatem Mertonensium receptus, ostendere incepit quantopere litterarum Græcarum et philosophiæ esset peritus. Deinde legationibus honorificis et publicis muneribus functus Oxoniam suam matura iam ætate reverti statuit, et officio civili quantum posset satisfacere. Itaque multis peregrinationibus actis, "Baculum," inquit, "meum ad fores Bibliothecæ Oxoniensis defigam, quæ vastationem tam calamitosam est perpessa." Quid plura? His etenim verbis inclusam habetis summi viri intentionem ac pietatem; cui nihil fere est quod addam, quippe tædium afferret si cunctos optimi Bodleii labores fusius exponerem: præcipue cum, nisi fallor, in manibus vestris harum rerum teneatis discriptionem plenam, neque vos fugiat aut numerus librorum aut ætas. Neque, credo, ignota sunt virorum insignium nomina, Henrici Savile, Gulielmi Laud, Ioannis Selden, Ricardi Rawlinson, Francisci Douce, Frederici Hope, ceterorumque omnium qui Bibliothecam Bodleianam patrocinio et munificentia identidem adiuverint.

Pessimi autem esset exempli in nostris ipsorum negotiis adeo commorari ut debito officio aliquid deesse videremur: quoniam huius diei proprium est salutem præclaris illis hospitibus dicere, quibus omnibus, si modo suppeteret tempus, viritim gratias agere vellem; haud ignarus quanto studio tum temporis impendium tum longi itineris fatigationem libenter toleraverint ut lætitiæ nostræ hodie fiant participes. Primo quidem Universitatem Cantabrigiensem salvere iuberem, Academiæ nostræ tam diu et amicitia et fortasse æmulatione honorifica obstrictam, quæ hodierno die inter legatos illustres Vice-cancellarium suum ad nostras sedes miserit. Nec minore observantia excipiendi sunt viri insignes qui a Londinio regni capite aliisque Angliæ urbibus, ab Academia Dubliniensi, a Walliæ, Scotiæ coloniarumque nostrarum

Universitatibus adsunt, quibus omnibus gratias referre iuvat. Longum autem esset, viri docti, si ea omnia de hospitibus nostris dicerem quæ in animo sint; si antiquarum in Europa Universitatum laudibus iustis satisfacerem, si de vigore iuvenili dissererem quem quasi nobis senioribus exemplum præstiterint Universitates Americanæ. Pace autem vestra liceat mihi virum eruditum nominatim salutare Professorem Croiset, qui hodie cum collegis tam illustribus adest, non tantum propter excellentem cultum atque humanitatem, sed etiam quia apud nos hodie Universitatis Parisinæ vicem implet. Etenim si Scholarum nostrarum et administrationis Academicæ memoriam repetamus antiquam, neminem fugiet quantum Parisiis debeat Oxonia, quot homines excultissimi doctrinam liberalissimam et philosophiæ Aristotelicæ rudimenta a Parisiis usque Oxoniam reportaverint: quos inter honoris causa Giraldum Cambrensem, Robertum Grosseteste, Rogerum Baconum numerare licet. Neque tamen totus de rebus Academicis debet esse sermo, ne forte finibus iusto angustioribus circumscribatur. Universa "Litteratorum Respublica" terrarum orbem ita complectitur ut plurimos habeat cives in suapte quemque provincia eximios. Quo fit ut hospites nostri, undecunque gentium advenerint, opulentissimam humanitatis et doctrinæ copiam quasi in publicum ferre et coram nobis exponere videantur. Adesse cerno viros honorabiles permultos, qui iuris sint peritissimi; qui scientiæ physicæ lucem attulerint novam; qui litteris, qui ingenuis artibus, qui libris et scribendis et edendis summa cum laude incubuerint; qui doctis præfuerint Societatibus; qui in rebus civilibus et in regni administratione feliciter sint versati. De tam præclaro virorum consessu quid quæso in hac qualicunque oratione dicendum est? Immo vero quid non dicendum? Equidem, si modo meæ ipsius vires vel temporis spatium sinerent, non solum laudes unicuique debitas impertire vellem, sed etiam lætitiam nostram verbis idoneis declarare, quam ex hac amicorum honorifica frequentia simus experti. Etenim quo magis, viri illustres, auctoritatem, amplitudinem, gravitatem, cultum, humanitatem, vobis inesse cernimus, tanto maioris est pretii voluntas vestra et benignitas quæ vos adduxerit ut hodie nobiscum una gaudeatis.

Cum vero tam breve sit vobis commorandi tempus, id maxime est cavendum ne quid pro nostra parte desit quod vobis gratum esse possit et iucundum. Bonam autem spem habemus, viri docti, fore ut vos neque loci amœnitatum neque amicitiæ nostræ neque publici qualecunque sit hospitii citius fiatis immemores. Immo ut omnia uno quasi verbo comprehendam, Vergilianæ illius Didonis votum, quo Æneæ comites amabiliter excipit, in honorem vestrum libenter adhiberem:

> Iuppiter—hospitibus nam te dare iura loquuntur—
> Hunc lætum Tyriisque diem Troiaque profectis
> Esse velis; nostrosque huius meminisse minores.
